We suggest that Russia end her difficulties by "sacking" Lenin and Trotsky onto each other.

Washington county furnished nine of the 43 business failures in Vermont during the year 1918. Nothing ventured, nothing lost does not apply here apparently.

An evidence of how much building operations were at a standstill during the war is given by the official report of the building inspector in Burlington that only seven residences were constructed in the largest city in Vermont during the year. Of course, one of the chief reasons for this condition was the restriction placed by the national government on construction work, but the shrinkage of population in Vermont incident to the war would account for the loss of construction even though the government restriction had not been imposed. With the removal of the restriction and the resumption of normal life with the end of warfare Burlington, as well as many other places in the state, should feel a new impetus in the house construction line. As vacant houses fill up because of returning soldiers and workers from the munitions factories the demand for houses to accommodate the natural growth will require new construction.

One of the small towns of the state furnishes the speaker of the Vermont House of Representatives. New Haven, in Addison county, the home of Speaker Charles S. Dana, is a place of little more than a thousand population. On the other hand the president pro tem of the Senate, Martin S. Vilas, comes from the largest city, Burlington, while the presiding officer, Lieutenant Governor (to be) Mason S. Stone resides in Montpelier. So the balances between the small and the large towns are fairly well maintained so far as early honors in the legislature are concerned. Speaker Dana, by the way, has had a little introduction to the office because he was the presiding officer of the House during the closing hours of the last previous session, succeeding Stanley C. Wilson, who resigned on being elected a superior judge by the legislature, over the House section of which he was presiding as speaker. So Speaker Dana is not entirely new to the position.

THE SHRINE AT OYSTER BAY.

Like Mount Vernon, Oyster Bay on Long Island will be the mecca for pilgrimages of unnumbered generations of Americans. So the grave of Theodore Roosevelt should have some distinctive sign, either in the shape of a handsome memorial shaft or a tablet which will commemorate the works and activities of one of the greatest presidents of the country. If one were to judge by the action of Mrs. Roosevelt in relation to the funeral she would prefer to have the body of her distinguished husband lie in comparative obscurity; but to a certain extent the body of Roosevelt is the property of the nation because of the official position which he held so long and the nation should, therefore, be granted the right to place some mark of its love and reverence at the graveside in the little cemetery on Long Island. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Roosevelt and the other members of the family will overcome whatever repugnance they may have to lifting the resting-place of the ex-president somewhat out of the obscurity that might come to it under other conditions.

HARDWICK

Death and Funeral of Henry DeFord, Well Known Citizen.

The funeral of Henry DeFord, one of Hardwick's best known citizens, was held from his late home on West Church street Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. E. G. French of Danville officiating. Interment was made in the family lot in the Sanborn cemetery at East Hardwick. Mr. DeFord was born in Canada in March, 1848, and came to the United States and settled in East Hardwick about 1871, and began work as section foreman on the St. J. & L. C. R. R., a position he held for a great many years, or until he came to this place and accepted a similar position on the Hardwick and Woodbury railroad, which position he held nearly to the time of his death, being compelled to give up active work a few weeks ago. He was married shortly after coming to Vermont, and two children were born to this union, Mrs. Kate Davis of Danville and Mrs. P. G. Hill of Swanton. Mrs. DeFord died in 1905, and in 1907 Mr. DeFord married Mrs. Maria Atkins, who, with the two daughters, survives him. Mr. DeFord early became a Christian and united with the Congregational church at the east village, later transferring his allegiance to the church here, where he was deacon for a great many years and a faithful attendant and staunch supporter, and he will be greatly missed in his home, the church, and among a large circle of friends.

Miss Vida Jacobs, who is taking a training course in the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston, is at the home of G. B. Shipman and wife for a few days.
